will necessarily take precedence in the primary in which the Governor is selected.

Some weeks ago the two primary men had things their own way, and were in a mood for calling the committee at once and settling the matter. Since then they have lost one or more votes, and the issue of the meeting Monday night is in doubt.

Some have suggested as a compromise the holding of a single primary, but with a two-column ballot, with separate pledges for those who can a ballot in the governorship in the city contest from those who can a ballot in the governorship in the city contest from those who can a ballot in the governorship of City Sergeant and other city offices who will not take an iron-bound pledge to support the party nominee in the state fight under all circumstances. While the leaders of the committee, boild that no one not a Democratic primary, there yet seems to be some difficulty in making the exact definition, in view of recent developments, as to just what is a Democrat.
